

Blog Export: Hollywood Blogslap, <http://unreelmedia.net/serendipity/>

Friday, December 30, 2005

HBS Radio debuts on Live365!

Okay, so right now it's nothing more than six hours of quite awesome soundtrack tunes on a loop, mixed in with some robotic station IDs and movie quotes, but that certainly puts Hollywood Bitchslap Radio ahead of your average morning zoo. We've got everything from Rushmore to Royal Tenenbaums, Virgin Suicides to Garden State, Boogie Nights to American Beauty and Lock, Stock and Two Smoking Barrels... So take a listen and tell us what you think!
Last modified on 2008-10-06 09:05 Defined tags for this entry: filmcritic, hbs, hollywood bitchslap, internet radio, radio

Posted by Oz in HBS/EFC at 20:14

Monday, December 12, 2005

Flashback Saturday: Best. Movie review. Ever.

That's not all that floats. Back in the early days of HollywoodBitchslap, we were basically a bunch of kids who liked movies and wanted a forum to say which ones sucked and which ones didn't. That meant the quality of our reviews was, well, mostly questionable - at best. But one review from those early days has stood the test of time, as a genuinely ground-breaking, elegant piece of cinema criticism that gave us all something to aspire to was the one and only review written by an individual known only as Never Fucking Shuts Up Bob. NFSUB reviewed the Forest Whitaker-directed film, Hope Floats, and his words have echoed throughout the years as the high benchmark in film criticism. For those who have never read these historic words, I present them to you today: CLICK HERE.

Posted by Oz in HBS/EFC at 04:06